- There were approx. 30 protesters earlier in the day who travelled from Confederation Park, along Laurier, Bank, Somerset, and Elgin to Parliament Hill
- There were approx. 2000-3000 protesters against the Russian invasion of the Ukraine who travelled from the Russian Embassy to City Hall. Laurier was closed between Elgin and Nicholas in order to accommodate the peaceful and cooperative crowd
- The City of Ottawa's Roads Department have almost finished remediating the roads downtown. The work should be completed by tomorrow morning
- Wellington from Elgin to Kent will remain closed to vehicular traffic as it is inspected and remediated. Pedestrian traffic will remain unrestricted
- City Council should decide in the coming days whether Wellington will reopen to traffic or be deemed a permanent pedestrian street
- All interprovincial bridges are fully open, with no lane reductions
- OC Transpo has resumed regular service downtown
- Police resources continue to monitor the encampments within and outside of the City of Ottawa limits.

Please note, the NCRCC will be stood down overnight. The Ottawa Police Service's Neighbourhood Resource Team (NRTs) will take over policing activities in the downtown core effective Monday morning.

This will be the last update from Intersect for this event, pending any change in the current environment.
